Survey 'unfair' to soldiers

By Delfin T. Mallari Jr.
Inquirer Southern Luzon

LUCENA CITY—The chief of the Armed Forces Southern Luzon Command based in Camp Nakar here, called the Pulse Asia survey that tagged the military as the most corrupt government agency "unfair" to the rank-and-file soldiers.

Dendoab said the perception of the public, which may have been due to the congressional hearings on an alleged multimillion peso slush fund in the military, involved only a "few" past top military officials and "have not yet been verified in court."

"It may be unfair to the great majority of our soldiers but we should not fear the truth and even perceptions (by the public)," Lt. Gen. Roland Detabali, Solcom commander, added in a phone interview yesterday morning.

Challenge

Nevertheless, the present AFP leadership sees the scandal as a "challenge to improve the system," he said.

Col. Eduardo Año, commander of the Army's 201st Infantry Brigade operating in Quezon province, also shared Detabali's lament.

"(The survey) is unfair to all the members of the AFP," Año said in a text message.

Año also pointed out that only a few officers were involved in the alleged fund scam, adding that the officers involved had already been criminally charged in court.

"They are not even one percent of the AFP strength. We also want all those who committed corruption to be punished," Año said.

To prevent demoralization in the ranks of line soldiers, Detabali said they have been reaching out to them to explain what happened in the Senate hearings and to point out that reforms have already been introduced to stop a repeat of corrupt practices.

No need to fear

"So long as our soldiers and officers remain focused on their jobs and continue to trust each other, we need not fear anything," said the Solcom commander.

An Army private in Camp Nakar told the Inquirer that he was "not surprised" with the survey results.

"With all the exposes in the Senate hearings widely covered by the media, the AFP is already doomed," said the soldier who requested anonymity as he was not authorized to speak to the media.

However, he still defended the integrity of the AFP as an institution.

"The military officials accused in the Senate can be counted on my fingers. Anyone who will accuse us all of being corrupt will be directly insulting every soldier and officer. I want anyone out to tell that to me directly, to my face so he will be in for a painful surprise," said the soldier.

Most corrupt

Pulse Asia said 49 percent of adult Filipinos considered the military the most corrupt government agency, up from just 4 percent in February 2009.

The survey, conducted from Feb. 24 to March 6, covered 1,200 representative adults. It had a margin of error of plus or minus 3 percentage points.

Former military budget officer George Rabusa claimed in a recent series of Senate hearings that former AFP Chiefs of Staff Angelo Reyes, Diomedio Villanueva and Roy Cimatu—who all appeared before the Blue Ribbon Committee—were allocated P50 million, P160 million and P80 million in send-off gifts, respectively.

Reyes committed suicide on February 8.

Noynoy orders Cabinet to air Q1 accomplishments

By Norman Bordadora

PRESIDENT Aquino has instructed members of his Cabinet to submit accomplishment reports for the first quarter of the year to inform the public about what their respective departments have done.

Communications Operations Secretary Herminio Coloma said over government-run radio station dzRB that the President's instruction was caused by the recent surveys that assessed the public's satisfaction with the Aquino government.

"The President has asked the members of his Cabinet to submit their accomplishment reports for the first quarter of the year to inform the people about the programs and initiatives these government agencies have been doing," Coloma said.

"This is to fulfill the President's pledge about important points in his program for the Filipino people. The administration wants the people to know that all of the initiatives that this government has been doing is a response to their needs," he added.

Number of new teachers down

AMID A severe teacher shortage, the numbers can only get worse with the results of those passing the annual Licensure Examination for Teachers (LET) to decline the past years.

LET results for 2009 showed that only 23.92 percent of 60,976 graduates of an elementary education course passed the exam, lower than the 2008 rating of 29.52 percent. For the high school education course, 16,798 graduates or 26.84 percent passed a separate LET exam.

The passing rates in 2008 were the highest in the last five years but the figures were still around a third of all examinees.

The 2009 ratings were also lower than the 2004 figures, when 26.05 percent of elementary education graduates passed and 27.31 percent hurdled the secondary education test.

Licensure exams across 44 disciplines have shown a general downward pattern in figures from the Professional Regulation Commission, as compiled by the Commission on Higher Education (CHEd).

"The problem is the quality of teachers is declining, even of those who pass the LET. I think we should look at the colleges ...," said Benjamin Pelicargas, spokesperson of Teachers' Dignity Coalition.

"The private colleges provide education based on how much a student pays. In the first years of a student's stay in school, they should already be trained and educated," she said.

Pelicargas advocated a clearer assessment of schools and students in education courses.

"Maybe we need to assess schools that offer education courses. Maybe early assessment could also help so that at the secondary level the students already know their interests and abilities," she said.

Teacher education is among the top five "oversubscribed" courses in the country along with business administration, nursing, information technology and hotel and restaurant management, according to CHEd Chair Patricia Licuanan. Steve Quilatesada

Output of selected industries improved in Jan.

By Rea T. Olchondra

PRODUCTION OF selected industries improved in January, with most registering double-digit growth in terms of volume and value year-on-year, the National Statistics Office (NSO) said.

"Volume of Production Index (VoPI) continued to accelerate as it posted year-on-year growth of 25.8 percent in January 2011," according to the NSO's preliminary report on the Monthly Integrated Survey of Selected Industries (MISSI).

The NSO noted in particular the strong performance of the following sectors: food manufacturing, miscellaneous wares, chemical, machinery, fabricated metal products, chemical products, furniture and fixtures, and petroleum products.

But on a monthly basis, VoPI slowed to 6.3 percent from December 2010. Significant reductions in factory output were noted in the following sectors: basic metals, publishing and printing, footwear and wearing apparel, and beverages.

Also in January, Value of Production Index (VaPI) for total manufacturing registered a two-digit growth of 25.8 percent from a single digit increase of 8.3 percent the previous year.

The NSO cited the two-digit rise in production values of these major sectors: food manufacturing, fabricated metal products, miscellaneous manufactures, petroleum products, leather products, chemical products, electrical machinery, textiles, and footwear and wearing apparel.

On a monthly basis, VaPI slid 4.7 percent in January 2011 from that of previous month. In December, value of production rose 5.8 percent.

The decline was attributed to the reduction in production values of four major sectors: basic metals, publishing and printing, footwear and wearing apparel and beverages.

Average capacity utilization in January 2011 stood at 83.5 percent.

Eleven major sectors registered capacity utilization rates of 80 percent and above: food manufacturing, basic metals, petroleum products, machinery except electrical, electrical machinery, nonmetallic mineral products, miscellaneous wares, paper and paper products, chemical products, rubber and plastic products and leather products.

The proportion of establishments that operated at full capacity (90 to 100 percent) was 16.8 percent in January 2011.

The MISSI is one of the statistical activities undertaken by the NSO to provide fresh indicators on the performance of growth-oriented industries.

The survey gathers monthly data on employment, compensation, production, net sales, inventories and capacity utilization.

'Build where we sell, source where we build'

General Motors president for Southeast Asia Martin Apfel bares big plans for the region

By Jason K. Ang

A HIGHLIGHT of the Philippine media's visit to the Bangkok Motor Show was a conversation with Martin Apfel, General Motors president for Southeast Asia; Roberto Rempel, GM's global vehicle chief engineer; and Albert Arcilla, president of The Covenant Car Company Inc. (TCCC) (which is GM's Philippine distributor). Based in Bangkok, Apfel discussed the new Chevrolet Colorado, the performance of Chevrolet in the region, and why GM doesn't show Hummers.

APFEL

Question: One of the selling points of the Colorado is the bold design. Apart from that, what are the selling propositions of the new pickup?

Martin Apfel: The way we conceptualized the Colorado, there are two pillars for this truck. First, it is 100 percent Chevrolet, with DNA that defines a Chevrolet truck that's right for its time. I doubt there's anything as pretty as this on the market. Second, we aim to build the best truck, benchmarked against competition in everything that matters.

Rempel: GM is a tremendous engineering company for trucks. We understand trucks. Our truck will be very refined. You will feel the difference in our trucks, and yet it will not lose sight of what a truck should be.

Question: Will you be developing MPV and SUV variants of this platform?

Apfel: Is that a recipe for success? Yes!

Question: How is the growth of GM in Southeast Asia?

Apfel: Thailand January-February is 88 percent stronger than 2010. In Indonesia, we have outpaced the industry by practically 100 percent. These numbers sound impressive, because they come from a low base. But it tells you our trajectory. Philippines—I would say—in pure growth numbers, not yet as strong as the other big markets, but also growing. We have a great partner in TCCC. They're thinking very creatively in how to reach the customer.

For example, Chevy certified used cars—that helps us tremendously in Thailand. We are going to see the first application of that in the Philippines this year. We need to get better on the service and parts availability side, and improve the predictability of the cost of ownership.

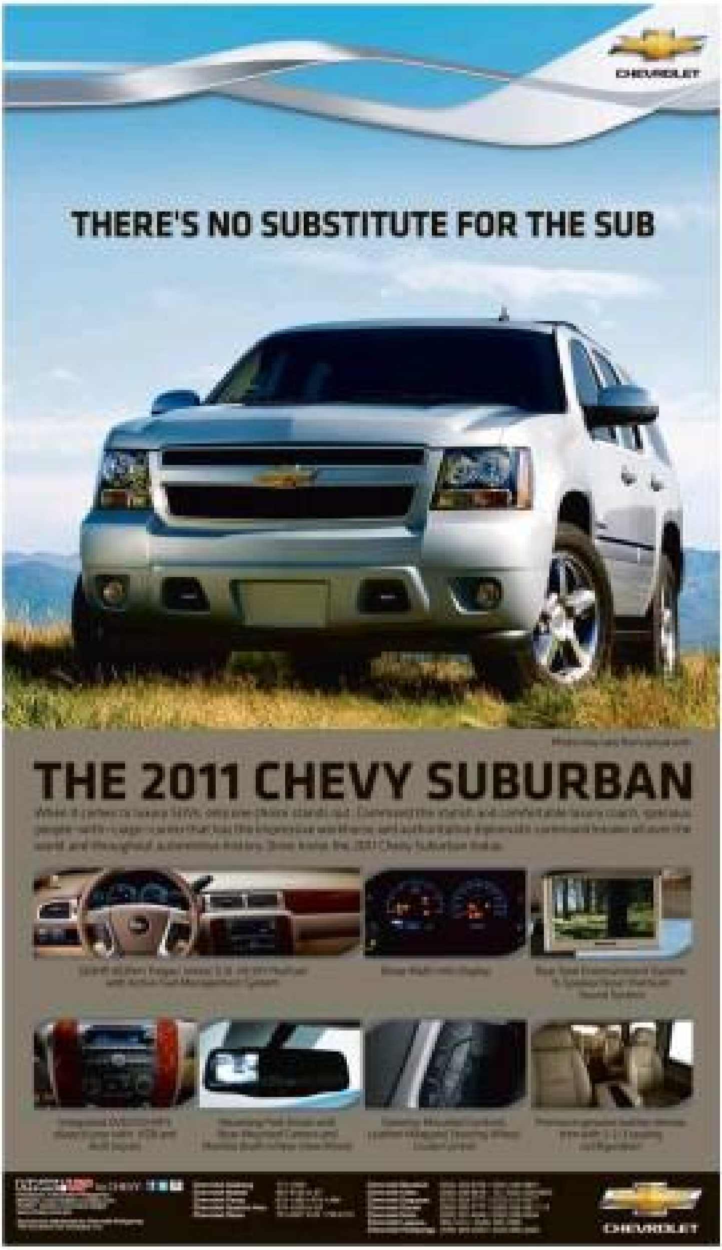

Albert Arcilla: We're really excited, as we are in sync with regional objectives. We will be climbing with new messages and new products this year and next year. When we all get back to the Manila Auto Show on April 7, I'm sure the Filipino motoring public will appreciate Chevrolet even more. The growth has been 54 percent in 2010, in just one year since TCCC.

Apfel: I promise you, you will see me on April 7 at the Manila Auto Show and my hand will be ready to pull back the cloth on a new vehicle.

Question: How will the production truck be different from the concept truck?

Apfel: There the 42nd concept car under Ed Welburn. Ed said he wants to build one.

Wi-Fi autos now crowding information superhighway

WASHINGTON—MORE cars are hitting the information superhighway thanks to new automotive Wi-Fi technology that allows vehicles to become rolling "hot spots."

Analysts say consumers are warming to the notion of more connectivity in their cars, with "apps" for information and entertainment just as they have with their smartphones or tablet computers.

"Initially, having Internet access in the car sounds like a distraction and frivolous but as time passes it will become a part of our lives and we will feel uncomfortable not having access," said Jeff Kagan, an independent telecoms analyst.

"I think this is going to grow into a [illegible] boom sector." Market research firm iSuppli said it expects a surge in worldwide shipments of car Wi-Fi systems to 7.2 million units by 2017, from just 174,000 in 2010.

Wi-Fi has been around for several years as an aftermarket accessory but many major manufacturers now offer some form of Wi-Fi or are developing it.

Ford has been offering Wi-Fi in selected models since 2010 and some form of Internet access is also offered by many other major automakers including General Motors, BMW, Audi, Saab and Chrysler.

In mid-March, Finnish telecom giant Nokia announced the launch of a Car Connectivity Consortium of 11 companies with common technical standards, including vehicle manufacturers Daimler, General Motors, Honda, Hyundai, Toyota and Volkswagen.

Autonet Mobile, a California-based firm that touts itself as the "first Internet-based telematics and applications service platform" for the auto market, has over 10,000 US customers using its CarFi service at $29 a month, said chief executive Sterling Pratz.

The group recently signed agreements with General Motors and Subaru.

Pratz told AFP that consumers are looking for better entertainment options for passengers in their vehicles and can Wi-Fi for videos, gaming and social networking.

"They feel there is a better way to stay entertained in the car compared with the DVD player. They lead a connected lifestyle and when they get in the car they feel disconnected," he said.

A next step, Pratz said, is other types of applications that can allow parents to monitor speeds of their teen drivers and to find their car if it is stolen.

Autonet, which started in 2006 and has funding from venture capital firms, only operates in the US market but Pratz says he plans talks with European carmakers and is considering Asia as well.

In Europe, Audi is using a system from Marvell Technology and Harman, [illegible] to create a factory-installed mobile hotspot, allowing up to eight devices to be connected.

"I believe today's consumers want the convenience of seamless connectivity and live content wherever and whenever they choose—whether in the home, office, classroom or automobile," said Weili Dai, Marvell's co-founder and vice president in announcing the system.

"Finally, the car is connected to the rest of our lives." Saab meanwhile has announced its own system based on Google's Android operating system, dubbed IQon, touted as "a completely new car infotainment user experience." The Swedish automaker will allow third-party developers to develop "apps" by accessing 500 signals from different sensors in the vehicle.

"With Saab IQon, there are no limits to the potential for innovation," said Saab's Johan [illegible]. "We will be inviting the global Android developer community to use their imagination and ingenuity." Analysts say the market is likely to grow as more applications become available—for entertainment, navigation or even for diagnostics of the automobile.

Yet a key question for developers of the technology is whether to offer Wi-Fi as a separate data system or allow consumers to bring their own.

Ford's Wi-Fi system called MyFord Touch, which is added to its SYNC connectivity for mobile phones and music players, offers no separate data plan but

Exhibit on P-Noy's rise to the presidency opens in Cebu mall

MALLGOERS AT SM City Cebu had the rare opportunity to relive the spirit of the Edsa Revolution when "The Inaugural" exhibit made a stop at the Queen City of the South.

The exhibit, which is based on the book published by President Aquino's campaign bureau head Maria V. Montelibano, was launched Feb. 17 at The Block at SM City North Edsa as part of the Edsa 25th anniversary celebrations.

"The Inaugural" chronicles the campaign of Mr. Aquino, son of the late president Corazon C. Aquino and assassinated political leader Benigno Aquino Jr., in images by senior photojournalists and accounts written by participants of the seminal volunteer-powered campaign that brought Aquino to the presidency.

The President's sister Ballsy Aquino-Cruz graced the exhibit and book launch at the Rotunda Area of SM City Cebu. Aquino-Cruz thanked the Cebuanos for giving her brother a huge margin of votes during the May elections.

Lawyer Democrito Barcenas spoke on behalf of the Aquino volunteers and thanked Mrs. Aquino-Cruz for taking time out to meet P-Noy's supporters in Cebu. The book's co-publisher Joey Arellano also gave a short speech on behalf of Montelibano.

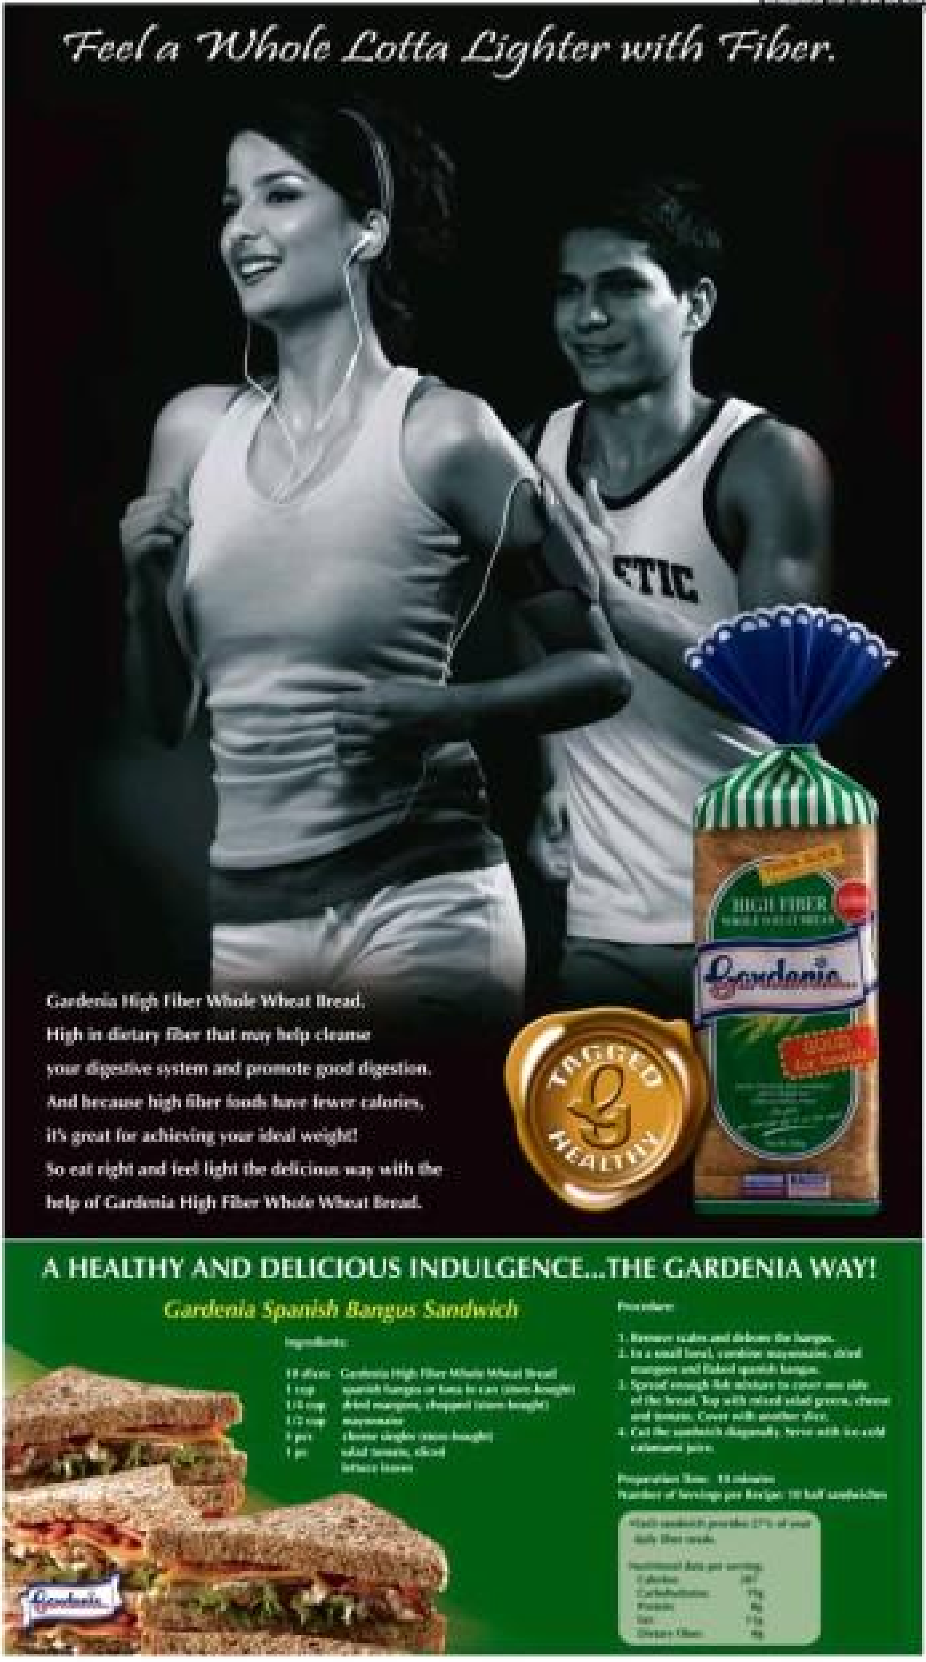

Prominent Cebuano officials led by Rep. Tommy Osmeña and wife, Councilor Margot Osmeña, Mayor Michael Rama, Bogo City Mayor Celestino Martinez and City Councilors Jun Pe and Alvin Dizon attended the event, as did Eloisa Fernan, Elvira Lopez and Teresita Mendezona.

The launch was also a grand reunion of Aquino supporters led by Cebu P-Noy Volunteers chair emeritus lawyer Augusto Go and Nestor Uy. SM officials led by SM Prime Holdings vice president Marissa Fernan and vice president for marketing Millie Dizon welcomed them.

Highlights of the event included a shower of yellow confetti and a signing of books by Ballsy Aquino-Cruz.

After the Cebu run, "The Inaugural" exhibit roadshow will go to SM City Bacolod from April 24 to 30, SM City Cagayan de Oro from April 29 to May 8 and SM City Davao from May 13 to 22.

It will go back to Luzon on May 30 to June 5 when it makes a stop at SM City Naga, and will proceed to SM City Batangas on June 9 to 15, SM City Sta. Rosa from June 20 to 27, SM City Baguio from July 5 to 16 before its grand finale at the SM Mall of Asia during the last week of August.

Parents discover effects of gym on their kids

KITTY AMARRILLO Clinton is a [illegible] who works for the Asian Development Bank. She is a certified Advantage Vinyasa Yoga and certified kids' yoga instructor, and the mother of Lucas and [illegible].

She explains why her sons are enrolled at The Little Gym. "I was first impressed by its approach of combining the need for physical development with the belief that children should be taught independence and self-confidence at a young age."

"Being physically fit and healthy is a crucial element in anyone's well-being, and in particular that of children, so The Little Gym was a perfect fit for us."

Another mother focuses on the environment—"I like that at The Little Gym, children have fun while learning, they are affirmed and given positive feedback, and they learn gymnastics in a nurturing environment," says Moira Borg, mother of 9-year-old Enzo, 7-year-old Zara and 2-year-old Patrice.

"The Little Gym really helps in building our children's self-esteem. The one-hour, once-a-week class really boosts their confidence, because at every possible instance, the teachers genuinely praise the efforts of the kids. You can see the pride they feel when they're able to perform a gymnastic skill well, or else see them try and try again to get that cartwheel with straight legs. This not only builds their physical strength, it also teaches them perseverance."

Borg has joined the company as gym teacher. "I firmly believe in The Little Gym's philosophy of teaching life skills through motor development. The Little Gym was the place for me—and I have been teaching since 2004."

Christine Urgello, mother of Una and David, also loves the way each child is given the opportunity to shine.

"We like that a child's personality is allowed to emerge on its own as opposed to a child being molded into a school's ideal," she says. "And what we like most is that independence is emphasized, but not forced on children."

MOIRA Borg marvels at the confidence and independence she has seen in her children ever since they started classes at The Little Gym. "I can definitely say they are more self-confident and aren't afraid to try new things. Lorenzo has been with The Little Gym for six years. He's very open to try new food, new games, and new activities. Zara really enjoys gymnastics and loves to practice her cartwheels. Patrice is such an explorer. She's also very sociable and independent. Plus, she's really very polite and has learned to take turns with her classmates in the gym."

Urgello's in-laws, retired Lt. Gen. Raul S. Urgello and Consuelo Urgello, were the ones who introduced their children to The Little Gym. They believe in the program so much that they offered to pay for all their grandchildren's toddler classes.

Positive toddler impact

It is when you see the positive advances in your child's development that you know you made the right choice.

Borg marvels at the confidence and independence she has seen in her kids since they started classes at The Little Gym.

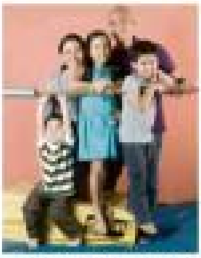

"I can definitely say they are more self-confident and aren't afraid to try new things," she says. "Lorenzo has been with The Little Gym for six years. He's very open to try new food, new games and new activities. Zara really enjoys gymnastics and loves to practice her cartwheels. She is also very confident and can socialize with other children easily. Patrice is such an explorer. She's also very sociable and independent. Plus, she's really very polite and has learned to take turns with her classmates in the gym."

Deo Custodio, father of 6-year-old [illegible], 4-year-old [illegible] and 2-year-old Santiago, notes: "Each of our kids has shown a lot of confidence in approaching new situations and meeting new people both here and abroad."

Big school

Urgello believes her gym stint gave her daughter Una an advantage when she applied for big school.

"Una felt confident interacting with teachers even if they were strangers to her. She was also comfortable with being in a group in a school setting, talking with a teacher without a parent present. In school, she has adapted well, and has a lot of friends."

DEO CUSTODIO has also noticed The Little Gym's positive effect on his children. "Each of our kids has shown a lot of confidence in approaching new situations and meeting new people both here and abroad."

KITTY Amarrillo-Clinton shares, "Being physically fit and healthy is a crucial element in anyone's well-being, in particular that of children, so The Little Gym was a perfect fit for us."

GOING BEYOND THE HOUR AT THE SM SUPERMALLS

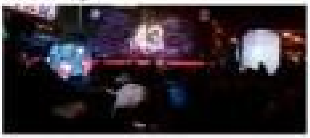

40 SM Malls in the Philippines and 3 in China join Earth Hour

Passing on the spark from one to another, that's the way to go to save the Earth

Voting for earth from the Grand 60 Switch Off Party at the SM Mall of Asia to the SM Malls in the Philippines and China

The grand Earth Hour 60+ Switch Off Party was attended by Lucille Sering of Climate Change Commission, DENR Secretary Ramon Paje, WWF Chairman Vince Perez, Department of Energy Secretary Rene Almendras, Hans Sy of SM Prime Holdings, Atty. Louie Soriano of Honda Cars Philippines and representatives of other supporters of the Earth Hour Project.

The SM Supermalls crossed borders and voted for the Earth as its 43 malls in the Philippines and three in China made the switch in support of Earth Hour on March 26, 2011.

For sixty minutes -8:30 – 9:30 PM, the SM Malls joined over 15 million Filipinos in 1,650 towns, cities, and municipalities, as well as the rest of the global community in this united symbolic action against climate change by switching off their lights.

The grand Earth Hour 60+ Switch Off Party was held at the SM Mall of Asia, and attended by Department of Energy Secretary Rene Almendras and environmental advocates like Vince Perez and Lory Tan, former DENR and DAR Secretary Heherson Alvarez, former DENR Secretary Bebet Gozun. Corporate Executives Atty. Louie Soriano of Honda Cars Philippines, Ms. Melinda Dayao of Meralco, and JB Baylon of Coca Cola Philippines also attended the program hosted by Marc Nelson and Rovilson Alvarez. SM executives led by Ms. Elizabeth Sy welcomed them.

The rest of the SM Supermalls in the Philippines also made the switch simultaneously, lighting candles for a solemn minute of prayer for the earthquake and tsunami victims of Japan. Customers also wrote their pledges in a commitment wall.

In China, the three SM Malls – Xiamen, Jin Jiang, and Cheng Du also held their first ever Earth Hour event. In SM Jin Jiang, with Mr. Wong Yong Sheng, Division Head of the Environmental Protection Bureau and Mr. Xu Zheng Sheng, Officer in Charge of the Environmental Protection Bureau as well as 500 shoppers took part in the switching off of the Digital Glass Ball Centerpiece as SM Little Star Champion Zhuang Jin Jin performed a song and dance number.

Earth Hour started in 2007 in Sydney, Australia when 2.2 million homes and businesses turned off their lights for one hour to make a stand against climate change. The following year, Earth Hour had become a global sustainability movement with more than fifty people across 35 countries participating. Global landmarks like the Sydney Harbor Bridge, the CN Tower in Toronto, the Golden Gate Bridge in San Francisco, and the Colosseum in Rome. All these stood in darkness as symbols of hope for a cause that is growing more urgent by the hour.

Last March 27, 2010, a record of 128 countries and territories joined in the global display of climate action. More iconic buildings from the Asia Pacific, including the SM Mall of Asia globe turned off their lights, came together as they celebrated and contributed to the one thing we all have in common – our Earth.

In the Philippines, Earth Hour is a yearly effort of the World Wildlife Fund – Philippines together with the SM Supermalls nationwide through the Environmental Committee of SM Cares.
